A FIREBALL IN HIS STOMACH. The Delusion that Drove Michael Kelly Into

Norwich, Aug. 11 .- A year ago Michael Relly was a prosperous mason of Tatville, a river village four miles north of this city. He owned a pleasant cottage, earned excellent wages, and had a wife and five children. He was the picture of health and robust strength. One day he fest slightly unwell. He had never been sick before, and he fancied he was going to die. The next day he was no better. His mind was filled with gloomy apprehensions. His physician vainly assured him that melancholy, and not physical aliment, was his trouble. At length he gave up work altogether and went among his companions daily, telling them that there was a ball of fire revolving in his stomach. He said it began to form as a spark, and grew larger until it filled his stomach. He visited a score of surgeons in the towns adjoining his own, and asked them with tears to cut into his stomach and extract the fire ball. The doctors gave him medicines and sent him home.

About the middle of July he steathfile evaded his watchers and went to Boston. A quack there gravely informed him that his stomach had swung loose from its fastenings and that it needed refusiening. The quack sold him medicine for a large sum of money, and told him the remedies would refusien the member. Kelly came home and faithfully swallowed the nestrams; but the fireball still burned in his stomach. He again set out for medical sid. He went to Hartford. Bridgeport, and Providence in the latter part of last month, but no doctor was able to relieve his trouble. As he was rapidly spending his money on physicians and quark medicines, the town authorities decided to send nim to the Middletown Asylum for the Lisane and Officer Holmes took him there.

Last Monday Mr. Brown visited him at the asylum. Kelly appeared to be in excellent spirits and in much better health. On Tuesday afternoon a telegram was received here announcing Kelly's death. It was learned to day that Kelly was peacefully sleeping in the asylum dormitory at 4 o'clock on Tuesday incrining when the watchman made his round. Two hours later he was found dead in his cot, his body still warm. He had committed suicide by tying a piece of clastic webbing about his throat. He had fastened it tight enough to strangle himself. The body was sent on to this city yesterday morning. are was a hall of fire revolving in his stom-

MARING MILLIONS HAPPY.

The Remarkable Scheme of Uncle Rufus

"I've been thinking of the recent decisions of our Judges favoring monopolies," said Uncia Rufus Batch yesterday, "Some of them seem to think that monopolies are blessings in disguise. Maybe they are. I don't know. But if they are, they will eventually solve the problem of civil service reform, make child's play of the science of government, and revolutionize every acre of the Union. Trade and commerce, mining and manufactures, morals and munners everything will be turned inside out, All we have to do is to boil down all public and private enterprises in the crucible of consoliwould be if all the railroads were consolidated grand attendance. This year the Kenner can in one company! Only think what a blessing one tooth-brush maker, one antique furniture establishment, a single insect-powder mill, and one manufacturer of artificial eyes. My, but it would a great blessing!"

Here Uncle Rulus placed his feet on the round of his chair and began to fan himself. We would have one grand boarding house," he continued, "one saw mill, and one shooting gallery. There would be a huge hair-pin factory, and one tremendous shop for the manufacture of mowing machines. One importer could supply the country with sausage casings and curied hair. We would have one iron foundry and one homesopathic medicine factory; one banking house and one boot-blacking establishment; one landscape architect and one junk dealer; one kerosene mill, one whiskey rectifier, and one flavoring extract establishment. My, my, what a blessing it would be!'

Uncle Rufus dropped his feet from the round of his chair and eagerly bent forward, "Only think how happy we should be," said he.

"We would have but one electric light company and only one razor strop establishment; one great coilege and one immense Chinese laundry; one museum of art and one grand peanut stand; one brewery, one beer salcon, and one manufacturer of wooden toothpicks. The more you look at it the happier you become. Only think of having only one President, one Senator, one member of Congress, one candidate, and one vote. It's enough to make a man dance with delight to think that there would be only one court, one Judge, one law-yer, one detective, and one onion fleid. This would dumbfound the Irish. Then we should have one editor, one reporter, one newspaper, and one lunatic asylum. Oh, it would be tremendously grorious, if not gioriously tremendous!"

Here Unele Rujus again hitched the heese of his Oxford ties on the round of his chair and fanned himself vigorously. "There would be but one orthodox preacher," he continued; "his sermon would be telephoned by one telephone to every church in the country. Everything would be done by clockwork, and every man and woman would be sure to hear a good sermon. We could have to hear a good sermon. We could have to hear a good sermon would be sure to hear a good sermon. We could be full to the Mutmai, the Automatic, and Ranid Transit telegraph lines down with the Western Union, and make everybody supremely happy. Then we might have one hand organ, one hay cutter, one pewhapp, one pedestrian, and one negro minstret. My, but it would be worderfully pleasing, if not pleasing for course," said Unc. Bruise, and many a raileration of his days on the deck of a canal boat. think how happy we should be," said he, We would have but one electric light might begin to develop muscle in other directions than making pills, and many a cleraryman might seil pies and molasses candy. It's a gigantic undertaking, and of course it will meet some opposition, but all right-minded and dispassionate men would approve of it if things go on as they are now going. It's judiciously political, if not positically judicious.

"But the most glorious part of this glorious scheme," babbied Uncle Rufus, "is yet to come Everything could be consolidated into one great head, and controlled by one master mind. The nation and the whole world might be kept moving in perfect accord with his ideas. It would be mirraculously astounding, if not astoundingly mirraculous,"

"But where could you find a man capable of filling such a position?" we asked.

"Hush," whispered Uncle Rufus. "I've found the very man. Nature moulded him for this very piace. In honesty of purpose, intelligence, morality, benevolence, talent, and beauty of face and figure he is unequalled. His innocent simplicity gives him unsolicited popularity. Best of all, he has had his head examined cent simplicity gives him unsolicited popularity. Best of all, he has had his head examined by the phrenologists, with most wonderful results. They have given him a certificate that ought to satisfy the world. Every man must have his head examined and pass this same ordeal before civil service reform is an accomplished fact."

"But who is this wonderful man?" we asked.
"Jay Gould," was the reply, and you may add that Russell Sage entirely agrees with me.
It's truly remarkable, if not remarkably true."

We could have a ngainst the Manhattan Company. The counsel ;

Julys Westbrook said that an adjournment would make no difference to him.

Mr. Bacon, on behalf of the New York Company, or possed the motion for delay. He urged that the Attorney-General had already procured eighteen days' delay.

As Mr. Ira Shafer rose to speak, Mr. Bacon said he wished it to appear on the record who Mr. Shafer represented. Mr. Dorsheimer joined in this request good naturedly.

Mr. Shafer represented for some stockholders—Mr. Kneeland for one, He did not think it was too much to grant the delay asked for. He urged that it was very important for the stockholders of the Manhattan to know whether their property was worth $2,000,000 or nothing, and that was the question involved in the report of the receivers on the assets, and in the proceeding. proceeding.

The pigeon was a little startled by the vim of Mr. Shafer's delivery, and hopped toward Judge Westbrook.

Mr. Davies, on behalf of the Manhattan Company, said it would be a very strange proceeding to go on with the case when the plaintiff was

A ter making this statement she was put in a police van, and quickly removed to the same put as that in which Guiteau is confined. The murderess is an old black hag of a type only too common here. Under the shadow of Howard University, erected for the liberal culture of the negroes, exists as victious and degraded a community as can be found anywhere. They lately held a week's came meeting in a grove of oaks just in front of the University, which was a series of barbarous carricatures on religion. The woman's confession is a good example of the superstitious jurgion of many of these ignorant people. The police officer who heard the story tells me that she gave it without betraying aguation or remorss. She evidently puts the biame on the devil, and thinks that she is to be more pitied than punished.

As is so frequently the case, the plan adopted by the criminal to shield herself was the cause of her discovery. After killing the children in the manner described, she went to her shanty. Subsequently, to avert suspicion, she visited the house a second time, with a washboard, which she left on the premises. It was at this second visit that she as seen by the neighbors and her excited motions noted. The washboard was found and identified as hers, and she was arrested mainly on that proof. The blood was that she had killed the children by striking them with this utensil. This, as the event has proved, was an entirely erroneous suspicion, but the woman, finding that the washboard was discovered and was being used as evidence say that had she not revisited the scene of the murder she would probably not have been suspected.

NIGLIGENCE ALL AROUND.

The Blame for the Rye Collision Fixed Upon Coroner Hyler's investigation of the collision on the New Haven Railroad at Rye was concluded yesterday. Baggageman Dunn was recalled, and was positive he had not told Vice-President Reed after the collision that he had flagged the down freight. Several witnesses had testified that Dunn had said to Conductor James Spaulding of the up freight: "Jimmy, I did it." "I didn't even know his name was Jimmy," said Dunn, "I never came in without a signal. I ought to be shot if I did, or Engineer Elliott ought to have reported me."

Dunn testified that he used no staff for his red flag, but carried it in his pocket, so as to be flag, but carried it in his pocket, so as to be ready with it at all times. "Here it is," he said, pulling it out and flourishing it before the love.

Superintendent J. T. Moody of the New York division of the road testified that the station agent had no authority to send out his baggage master as a flagman. The duty of reporting that Mr. Field, the station agent at Rve, had for nearly six years been transgressing the rules by sending out his baggage master, deviced upon both the conductor and the engineer of any train so flagged, but no such report had ever been made to the witness by any one. The witness knew of no better managed rail road.

Mr. George H. Watrous, President of the railroad company, testified that it was the duty of all the officers of the company to see that the rules were enforced, but that no legalive orallicuted spy was employed. Occasionally, howroad. Then you have thieves on the road," put in "Then you have thieves on the road," put in Jurof Gleisson.

"We carry a great many passengers," said the Fresident dryly.

In his opinion President Watrous said, the blame for the collision lay primarily with Conductor Spaulding, who should have sent a brakeman forward, but the engineer was also to blame, for he should have satisfied himself that everything was safe shead before he went on the cross-over. President Watrous challenged any one to show him a road doing as much business on which accidents are rarer. That Ethic Latin came to his death by a collision. That Ett's Latin came to his death by a callision caused by negligence or the completers on Spanishing's train and the stradegrees at five station in not observing the rules of the company. The stock market at the opening was dull and weak for the entire list, and Michigan Central Lake Shore and New Jersey Central alone showed even a moderate degree of activity. At the first board there was a pretty general recovery but Central Pacific, Union Pacific, Missourt Pacific, and Realing continued weak while ery, but Central Pacific, Union Pacific, Missouri Pacific, and Reading continued weak while C. C., C. and Indianapolis broke from 90, to 881s, and recovered to 891s. Subsequently Northern Pacific preferred and Richester and Pitisburgh were active and firmer. In the latest transactions an important alwance took place, and there was a flurry in Metropolitan Elevated with the market generally closing steady. The more important changes for the day were as follows: Advanced—Nashville and Chattanooga, 1/2; Metropolitan Elevated, X: Adams Express, 4/2. Declined—Denver and Richert Steading, 1/2; C. C. which was taken by Italy for the resumption of specie payments. The London Times this morning says: "We believe Italy has obtained elsewhere the amounts of builton she requires at present, and the anticipated withdrawals of gold from the Benk of Engand on Italian account are at any rate postponed. It is quite possible that a built in drain to America may begin at any moment; but at present, in spite of the withdrawal of builton from the bank on Tuesday for America, it cannot be said that any drain has set in. The bank directors will be, no cloud, prepared to raise the rate of discount quickly on the least sign of a drain to America or elsewhere, but with the cessation of the Italian demand for the present there appears to be no necessity for any action, at least in advance of the open market."
